Overview

The Vocational Evaluator gathers and reviews relevant background information, conducts tests, interprets test data and generates a comprehensive report detailing individual interest, abilities, and aptitudes in relation to vocational potential. The information is used to provide consumers with insight into vocational potential, a career path, and appropriate recommendations that facilitate attainment of educational and workforce goals.

Primary Tasks

- Evaluates and interprets vocational potential via test results, referral information, medical and psychological background; makes recommendations related to training, placements, vocational needs, employment potential, and long-term employment sustainability.
- Evaluates clients' potential through aptitude tests, work samples and/or on the job tryouts; advises clients of evaluation results and recommendations.
- Administers and interprets results of interest and aptitude tests, entry level skills, work samples and career exploration activities.
- Develops career assessment reports in a timely fashion which specify evaluation outcomes, observations and recommendations.
- Records all report details including evaluation outcomes, in VSP electronic client database.
- Prepares and disseminates reports reflecting test results, recommendations, and overall outcomes; submits reports to referring personnel.
